PRELIMINARY AMENDMENT

Sir:

In response to the first official action in this case, mailed June 4, 2004, applicant elected to pursue claims 24 and 26 – 33. These claims are directed to a process for teaching a person the proper technique for swinging a baseball bat using a unique batting swing trainer with certain structural features including:

- a. A shaft with first and second ends and a constant diameter between the ends;
- b. A first handle sized to accommodate both of the users hands at the first end of the shaft;
- c. A head having a diameter greater than the shaft and less than the head of a comparable baseball bat at the second end of the shaft;
- d. A stop on the shaft adjacent to the first handle; and
- e. A second handle movable between first and second positions and sized to accommodate all fingers on one of the user's hands in a batting grip.

The claimed process comprises gripping the first and second handles, swinging the trainer while simultaneously moving the second handle in the manner described, and producing an audible sound by striking the second handle against the stop. The remaining pending dependent claims are directed to further important details of the process.

In order to facilitate the examination of the pending claims, applicant is pleased to enclose a declaration of Jim Schwanke, a former professional baseball player and seasoned baseball coach who details the significant advantages of the method and apparatus of the present invention and provides compelling evidence that prior art relating to golf swing apparatus and teaching methods is not relevant to the present invention.

In addition to the declaration of Mr. Schwanke, there are also included letters from the owner/manager of a baseball academy (Mark Doran) and an experienced technology teacher/coach (Robert H. Bogdan) to further establish the unique advantages of the present method and apparatus. It is noted that these letters refer to the apparatus of the present invention by its trademark, "Zingbat".

It is requested that the Examiner give these materials careful consideration in examining the pending claims. If it is preferred that the letters provided by Messrs. Doran and Bogdan be submitted in affidavit form, it is requested that the Examiner telephone applicant's undersigned attorney and so indicate and declarations will be sought.

Respectfully submitted,
